WHAT IS THE MINING??

Mining refers to the process of acquiring and recruiting new members into the network or downline. This term is often used informally in MLM to describe the effort of building and expanding one's network of distributors, with the goal of increasing sales and earning commissions or bonuses based on the success of one's downline.

STAGES OF MINING:

Recruitment: A distributor (or member) recruits new individuals into the MLM business, which is often referred to as "mining" because it's similar to "digging" for new opportunities. The more people they recruit, the more they can potentially earn.

Building the Downline: Each new recruit is part of the person's "downline." The individual earns commissions not just on their own sales, but also on the sales made by those they recruit (their downline). "Mining" can also refer to the process of cultivating a strong and growing downline to generate more income.
